PROSECUTION CLOSES IN RICKARD CASE

New York, March 23.—The prosecution late today rested its case against Ted Rickard, sporting promoter, charged with criminally assaulting fifteen-year-old Sarah Schoenfeld, after Herman Berch, janitor of the apartment house on West 47th street, in which the attack was alleged to have taken place, had been called to the stand.

Berch testified that after Rickard's arrest a stranger had led him to Madeline Square Garden and that there Rickard, charging that someone was trying to "frame" him, told him that if he knew anything to keep quiet.

Berch then picked out among the spectators former police Captain Dominic Reilly as another man who later had approached him after he had gone before the grand jury and questioned him concerning his testimony. Berch alleged that Reilly had said he was working for Max

Stener, Rickard's counsel, and wanted to know "what it was all about."

The janitor said he had seen Rickard outside the 47th street apartment of the promoter's friend, Walter Fields, on four or five occasions, but swore he never saw him inside. Later he admitted having noticed Rickard in the vestibule one afternoon.

In their conversation at the Garden after Rickard's arrest, Berch said the promoter asked him if he had seen him (Rickard) at either of the apartment houses. At first he told of answering "yes" but later on, he said:

"I think I told him I hadn't seen him there."

On cross-examination the witness said Rickard had never directly asked him to lie. He said Fields had given him tickets to boxing bouts at the Garden several times.

Dr. William Travis Gibbs, surgeon for the Children's Aid society, testified he examined the Schoenfeld girl last month and found she had been assaulted.

Most of the day Nellie Gibbs, 12-year-old chum of Sarah Schoenfeld was under cross-examination. She said Sarah had a very poor memory and that in rehearsals at the society headquarters she "forgot" her "going to remember some things" they both had testified to regarding their relations with the promoter. Nellie admitted a number of previous friendships and described experiences in forging checks, stealing, playing truant and other escapades.

Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel denied a motion to dismiss charges of rape, assault in the second degree and abduction made by the defense after the state had closed its case.

Justice Wasservogel announced tonight that he had decided to try men, as well as women from the remaining sessions of the trial.

Women were barred at the outset because of the nature of the testimony, but society male auditors have been admitted daily to the court room.

The order was issued after several society women, who were refused admission, protested against "discrimination."

AMERICAN LEGION WANTS CO-OPERATION WITH COMPTROLLER

Major Michael P. Owens, commander of the Rau-Locke post of the American Legion at Hartford told the board of control Tuesday afternoon that the legion desired to act in co-operation with the state comptroller in the administration of the fund to provide aid to ex-service men, and Comptroller Russell said he wished to act in co-operation with the legion. The statements were brought out in the discussion which followed the complaint of Major Owens that the comptroller was investigating cases for relief with the aid of the state police. Governor Lake said the comptroller had the right to investigate the expenditure of the state's money, and Attorney General Frank E. Healy was of the same opinion.

It was stated that Miss Mary C. Walsh, who was employed by the comptroller to investigate cases of relief had been somewhat rude to the recipients and the statement of Thomas P. Smith the legion's investigator, did not support the allegation that Miss Walsh had been rude in her work of investigation.

The request of Treasurer Frank S. Butterworth of the legion for a bank balance to enable him to pay benefits to the ex-service men was the occasion of the meeting. The result of the discussion was that the board did not take action on the complaint of Major Owens or on the request of Mr. Butterworth. In the discussion, Mr. Butterworth told the comptroller that "he was quite fresh."

It was brought out in the discussion that there was some difficulty experienced by Mr. Butterworth in securing bank accommodations in New Haven in paying out money to ex-service men. The bank required him to maintain a balance on which he could draw. Comptroller Russell said there were one or two banks in Hartford that would be glad to give Mr. Butterworth the necessary accommodation.

"Is the idea to force me to adopt a Hartford bank?" asked Mr. Butterworth. The comptroller denied that that was his purpose, and asked Mr. Butterworth if he was interested in the New Haven bank where he wished to have a balance to check against.

Mr. Butterworth said he was not interested in the bank.

"Are you a stockholder?"

"No, I am not. Mr. Comptroller you are quite fresh," replied Mr. Butterworth.

"You told me you wanted a bank balance of $20,000," said Comptroller Russell.

Mr. Butterworth denied the statement and added (addressing the comptroller), "Your memory is very poor."

Attorney General Healy said he understood the money for expenses was coming out of the special appropriation.

"We want the co-operation of the comptroller," remarked Mr. Butterworth.

"We have sent you a surplus every week," answered Comptroller Russell.

"The comptroller is very willing to co-operate with you if you come in the right spirit," added Comptroller Russell.

Major Owens regretted the personalities which had characterized the discussion. He thought there should be a balance in the bank.

"Wouldn't you think $5,000 was a pretty good bank balance for a payroll of $5,000?" asked the comptroller.

"If Mr. Butterworth had a balance of $5,000 he would be satisfied," said Major Owens.

"What is the bank?" asked Treasurer Gilpatrick.

"The New Haven bank," answered Mr. Butterworth.

Governor Lake said the comptroller was entitled to the information which he desired concerning the expenditure of the state's money.

Comptroller Russell said he did not think his requests for information were unreasonable. He had offered to send a clerk from his own office to assist Mr. Butterworth, but the offer was refused.

5,587 ACCIDENTAL DEATHS ON RAILROADS LAST YEAR

Washington, March 23.—American railroad operation last year resulted in the accidental death of 5,587 persons and the injury of 43,324, according to compilations made public today by the Interstate Commerce commission. This was, however, a decrease under the totals reported for 1920, when 6,495 persons were accidentally killed and 63,756 injured. The commission estimated that the decrease in number of persons killed was 14 per cent, and 22 per cent in the number injured, and expressed the belief that the report chiefly reflected the falling off in traffic which occurred during 1921.

As in former years, a large proportion of the victims were trespassers on railroad property, 2,432 of the dead and 2,930 of the injured being so classified. In addition to the total casualties given,

INTEREST IN CONVENTION OF IRISH REPUBLICAN ARMY

Dublin, March 23.—Sunday's convention of the Irish republican army is a topic of paramount public interest.

Richard Mulcahy, minister of defense in the Dail Eireann cabinet issued a statement tonight that any officer or man attending the convention would thereby sever his connection with the Irish republican army, but that the commanding officer would for the present regard each case as one for suspension.

"Political friction has been forced into the army from outside," says the statement, "but in the face of the grave issues before the country we must anticipate that this friction will pass and the fundamental unity of the army reassert itself."

The national executive of the Irish labor party has adopted a resolution calling on the Dail ministry to reimpose the boycott on Belfast goods.

The largest amount given for a modern manuscript was paid in New York for Thackeray's 'The Rose and the Ring.' The author wrote and illustrated it himself for his child friend; and when it was last put up at auction it realized $23,000.
